Challenges in India-Mauritius Relations

Economic and FDI Concerns

1Post-DTAA Amendment Impact:

- •The 2016 revision of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) between India and Mauritius led to a sharp decline in FDI inflows from Mauritius to India.
- •Annual FDI from Mauritius fell from USD 15.72 billion in 2016–17 to USD 6.13 billion in 2022–23, reducing Mauritius' role as India's preferred investment conduit.
- •Mauritius seeks parity with Singapore and other financial hubs to remain attractive for Indian investors targeting Africa and the Global South.

2Limited Private Sector Engagement:

- •Indian economic presence in Mauritius is dominated by public sector enterprises (PSUs) such as Bank of Baroda, LIC, Indian Oil, and RITES.
- •Limited private sector participation reduces innovation, competitiveness, and diversification in trade and investment, leaving bilateral economic cooperation vulnerable to shifts in global markets.
- 3Trade and Logistics Barriers:High shipping costs, limited direct maritime connectivity, and regulatory constraints restrict the growth of bilateral trade beyond core sectors like petroleum, pharmaceuticals, textiles, and medical devices.

Geopolitical Competition

1China's Growing Influence: China has invested heavily in Mauritius, funding key infrastructure projects including:

oAirport terminal upgrades

oBagatelle Dam

oSports complex

oCruise ship terminal

•These projects strengthen China's strategic presence in the Indian Ocean, creating competition for India's traditional influence in Mauritius.

2Global Power Interest:

- •Apart from China, Mauritius is a target for European Union and Gulf nation engagement due to its strategic location in the Western Indian Ocean and its status as a financial hub.
- •India faces the challenge of maintaining strategic primacy while balancing Mauritius' growing multi-polar partnerships.

Security Risks

1Maritime Security Threats: The Western Indian Ocean is vulnerable to piracy, illegal fishing, and trafficking of narcotics and armsMauritius' location makes it a potential hub for transnational criminal networks, which could have spillover effects on India's maritime security.

2Limited Local Enforcement:India provides maritime patrols, coastal radar support, and capacity building, Mauritius' own limited enforcement capabilities make it reliant on India, creating a strategic dependency and potential security gaps.

Environmental Vulnerabilities

1Climate Change and Sea-Level Rise: Mauritius, as a low-lying island nation, faces rising sea levels, which threaten urban settlements, infrastructure, and tourism.

2Natural Disasters: Frequent cyclones, coastal erosion, and flooding disrupt economic activity and strain disaster-response mechanisms.

3Pollution and Coastal Degradation:Incidents such as the Wakashiooil spill (2020) highlight the vulnerability of Mauritius' marine ecosystems and the need for ongoing environmental monitoring and intervention.

Way Forward: Strengthening India-Mauritius Bilateral Ties

Economic and Trade Expansion

1Broaden CECPA Coverage: The Comprehensive Economic Cooperation and Partnership Agreement (CECPA) can be expanded beyond traditional goods to include services, fintech, digital trade, and e-commerce, fostering diversified bilateral trade.

2Financial Integration:Introducing a Rupee–Mauritian Rupee payment system can simplify transactions, reduce dependence on third currencies, and encourage trade and investment flows.

3Private Sector Participation:India should incentivize private sector investments in technology, renewable energy, and financial services to complement the existing public sector-led engagement, thereby improving competitiveness and innovation.

Sustainable Development and Climate Action

1Green and Blue Economy Projects: Joint initiatives in solar, wind, and floating solar energy can enhance energy security and promote sustainable growth. Investment in marine conservation, fisheries management, and coastal protection supports both environmental sustainability and economic resilience.

2Disaster Preparedness and Climate Adaptation:India can collaborate with Mauritius on early warning systems, cyclone mitigation, coastal infrastructure reinforcement, and disaster response training, leveraging past experiences like the Wakashiooil spill and cyclones.

Strategic and Maritime Cooperation

1AgalégaIsland Development:Upgrading infrastructure and surveillance capabilities on AgalégaIsland will strengthen India's regional maritime security presence and support MAHASAGAR objectives.

2Maritime Security Partnerships:Enhanced joint naval exercises, information sharing, and capacity building with Mauritian forces can secure the Western Indian Ocean, combat piracy, and protect sea lanes vital for India's trade and strategic interests.

Cultural, Educational, and Diaspora Engagement

1Promotion of Indian Culture and Language:Expanding cultural programs through institutions like the Mahatma Gandhi Institute, World Hindi Secretariat, and Indira Gandhi Centre for Indian Culture will deepen historical and people-to-people connections.

2Educational and Technical Cooperation:Increase scholarships, ITEC training, and youth exchange programs, including e-learning platforms like e-Vidya Bharti, to strengthen human capital in Mauritius.

3Diaspora Engagement:Establish a PravasiBharatiyaKendra in Mauritius to engage the Indian-origin community, facilitate entrepreneurship, and maintain socio-cultural bonds across generations.

Conclusion

?India-Mauritius relations are a comprehensive partnership encompassing strategic, economic, and cultural dimensions. India has been a trusted development partner and first responder in crises, while Mauritius plays a strategic role in the Western Indian Ocean, enhancing India's maritime and regional security under MAHASAGARChallenges like geopolitical competition, FDI decline, environmental threats, and limited private sector engagement exist, but can be addressed through expanded trade, investment, sustainable development projects, maritime cooperation, and diaspora engagementThe partnership reflects mutual trust, shared history, and long-term strategic alignment, making it resilient, forward-looking, and beneficial for both nations.
