The Delhi government launched the Lakhpatti Bitiya Yojana, a welfare scheme aimed at promoting financial security and education for the girl child in the national capital. The initiative was launched in the presence of Droupadi Murmalong with Delhi Chief Minister Rekha Gupta during the programme titled "Sashakt Naari, Samriddh Delhi."

Objective of the Scheme

The scheme aims to ensure that girls do not drop out of education due to financial constraints and to strengthen the economic empowerment of women and girls in Delhi.

Key Features of the Scheme

The government will deposit financial assistance in stages from birth until higher education.

The deposited amount, along with interest, will accumulate to around ₹1 lakh or more by maturity.

The amount is transferred directly into the Aadhaar-linked bank account of the girl child through Direct Benefit Transfer (DBT).

The final maturity amount is available when the girl turns 21 years old or completes graduation/diploma studies.
